Industrial Unionism

By CHRISTIANITY SERVICE

Secretary Victoria T. and L. Council

One of the great necessities of the hour is a full and intelligent discussion of the labor movement in its various phases. The necessity can only be attended to by a well supported labor paper. The Federationist is doing its share. A particular phase of the labor movement that ought to be understood and explained in this paper, right now, is that from all organizations which are known as industrial unionism. The B. C. Federation of Labor went into record in favor of the term of labor organization in its first annual convention, and it is a safe assertion that that sentiment is very true of the stronger trend among the working people in B. C. than it is in the United States.

The educational work of the Federation has continued by precept, example and in many cases by actual experience. Outside of the international organizations that are industrial in their organization plan and who have localities in this province, the B. C. Federation of Labor is the pioneer advocate of this principle of organization in B. C., and perhaps in the Dominion. That being the case, it seems proper that the reasons for its endorsement should be given in the provincial labor press.

One of the reasons why the writer has attempted to explain this question is the absence of any mention of it in the recently published report of the International Union of Marine Workers in Canada, besides the more or less casual reference to a small membership of several trades. As the readers of the Federationist will remember, the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada at its Calgary convention last year, endorsed industrial unionism, with a strong vote, however, against it.

The object of all workers' organizations is to improve the condition of the workers, and conditions of employment. The extension and consolidation of the whole movement, however, is labor, on the one hand, and the international proportions, are the other. SAID AS THOUGHT OF

With one self, which is a consequence of neglect of duty or lukewarmness, the seeking for easier byways, the desire always and everywhere to escape, to avoid, to shirk, to produce indeed more care, more demand than to go to the end in a straight policy.—Dorcas Decker.

The wage-workers of the Province of Saskatchewan will now have an opportunity to wonder what in blazes they were so collected to do.

For the next four years they will have the right to work when the boss feels disposed to give them an opportunity, at such wages as the conditions of the labor market will warrant.

When a bunch of union men go on strike, the daily press is very profuse in its estimations of the "time and wages lost" by the business world away from the bosses' industry. When a like bunch of militiamen go "to camp" by the train or boat load for a few weeks, the same press throws several volumes of patriotic fervor over the inhumanity of man-killing.

A contented slave never did anything to ameliorate the conditions of his class; and were it not for discontent we would still be using a sharp tool for the agricultural implement.

Discontent moves the world. The discontented are the world's progress.
