

to do in his previous haunts across the line among the "foreigners."

J. H. Hawthornthwaite, socialist member for Nanaimo, will remain on the job as "leader" of the Socialist party in British Columbia, despite the falsification of the daily press. When Jim was broke he was a no good; now that he has taken advantage of the capitalist game and cleaned up a few thousands by the sale of coal lands on Vancouver Island, he is dubbed a "capitalist" and runs in danger of becoming "respectable." Any one who heard his speech in Vancouver the other night will be somewhat disillusionized as to where he stands politically. On the contrary, Jim will use some of his plunder to help upset the system that makes it possible for individuals to corral the earth and compel the workers to pay tribute. A socialist press, possibly a daily, will be one of the nearby results of the capitalist activities of J. H. Hawthornthwaite. The history of the Socialist Party in British Columbia has only begun.
