OUR GLORIOUS SELF MADE MEN

WHAT ABOUT THE MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN WHO DRAG THE MACHINE?

This is how men are "self-made." It is at the expense of how many unmade men? This talk of self-made men is sickening! How did Hill and Schwab and Carnegie and Lipton make themselves and their billions? Only by the sweat and blood of the wage workers whom they robbed.

The Socialist Party stands for the millions of wage workers who have made these "self-made" masters, and who will unmake them too. Caesar was a "self-made" man, millions of chattel slaves made him. Charlemagne was a self-made man, millions of serf-slaves made him. Carnegie is a self-made man, millions of wage slaves made him.

As chattel slavery and serfdom have gone down in the forward march of the Human Race, so wage slavery, with its hideous tyrannies and hypocrisies is doomed.

A CHANGE IN BUSINESS

"UNCLE SAM LAYS IN A NEW STOCK OF GOODS."

There was one act passed at the last session of congress which may prove more far-reaching than the ratification of the Cuban treaty, or the authorization of the Panama canal, but which scarcely received a notice in the columns of the daily press.

Laboring men have begun to realize the fact that to-day the machinery of government is in the hands of the capitalist class. They have been forced to understand the truth of what Clarence S. Darrow says in his recent book, "Resist Not Evil:"

"But in reality the prime reason for all the armies of the world is that soldiers and militia may turn their guns upon their unfortunate countrymen when the owners of the earth shall speak the word. And these unfortunate countrymen are the outcast and despised, the meek and lowly ones of the world, the men whose ceaseless toil and unpalatable efforts have built the forts and molded the cannon and sustained the soldiers that are used to shoot them down."

"To say that these armies and frowning forts and galling guns are needed to maintain peace and order is to admit at once that the great mass of men are held captive by the more powerful few. Organized soldiers and policemen, courts and sheriffs, with guns and forts and jails, have the greatest advantage over the disorganized mass who can not act together, and who know not which way to turn to keep outside the meshes of the law. Not one in a thousand need be trained to arms and authority to keep the unorganized mass in the place reserved for it to live. The purpose of guns and armies is to furnish the few an easy and sure way to control the mass."

Hitherto, these armies in America have been largely made up of militia under the control of the various states. There was always a possibility that in some of these numerous states there might be a government not wholly obedient to the capitalist class. The tendency of laborers to elect themselves at the ballot box, as shown by the rapidly increasing Socialist vote, testifies to the fact that the day is not far away when some state governments will be controlled by those who produce the wealth and feed and clothe the people of the nation. If this time ever comes it is certain the militia can not be used to shoot down laboring men.

The national government, however, is so firmly entrenched behind customs and constitutional provisions established in the interest of the ruling class, that these rulers feel positive that this government may for a long time to come be depended on to defend their interests.

At the last session of congress a law was passed TAKING THE CONTROL OF THE MILITIA AWAY FROM THE VARIOUS STATES AND VESTING IT IN THE NATIONAL GOVERNMENT.

Workingmen have of late shown considerable hostility to the idea of enlisting in the state militia. Some means must be found to insure the continuance of an army for the defense of the proft-taking class. So a clause was included in the law providing that, if necessary, EVERY ABLE-BODIED MAN COULD BE SWORN INTO THE REGULAR ARMY AND COMPELLED TO SHOOT DOWN HIS

The American Farmer and the Socialist Party

A Running Debate Between Ernest Untermann, Associate Editor of "Appeal to Reason," Girard, Kansas, and Hermon F. Titus, Editor of "The Socialist," Seattle, Wash. Debate to be Closed by Karl Kautsky, Editor of "Die Neue Zeit," Berlin, Germany. Published in "The Socialist," Beginning May 3, 1903.

Introductory Explanation

The occasion of this debate was the removal by the National Executive Committee of the National Headquarters of the Socialist Party of the United States from St. Louis to Omaha and the coincident election of an Executive "Quorum" representing agricultural states.

The Position of the "Appeal." In defending this removal Editor Untermann made use of the following language ("Appeal to Reason," Feb. 14, 1903):

"The backbone of the American Socialist movement is in the Middle West (the Omaha region). The center of the class-conscious working class movement is there."

There is now more danger to the Socialist movement in the great cities than in the smaller cities of the Middle West and its farming majority.

The class-conscious farmers, the rural proletariat of this country, are the sincerest and truest guardians of the interests of the working class and never more so than at the present moment. The American farmers, unlike the European, have been through one continuous struggle against capitalist oppression for a century. And they have now reached a stage where nothing can sever them from their purpose of abolishing capitalism. Once they adopt the Socialist platform, they are the most revolutionary element in our ranks."

"In the country Socialist's hands the cause would be safer than in those of any other comrade."

The Position of "The Socialist." On this "The Socialist" (Feb. 22, 1903), commented:

"This may be true, but it has yet to be proved. The whole farmer question has to be threshed out in our forum. Meanwhile, it is undeniable our greatest strength in actual votes as well as our historic and economic basis, lie in the wage-working class. And again, March 8:

"This much is certain, that the farmer of Socialism to be given this leadership of the Socialist Party at the present stage of progress. . . . The truth is, the farmer will probably be the last to come up to the real Socialist program. The Socialist army in the United States may be said to stand at the parting of the ways. Either it may attempt to win the great body of organized labor as the central element of the working class, or it may turn toward the great body of the farmers as the strategic position. If it does the latter, it will separate itself from the International Party known as the Socialist Party, and will start out for itself on an unknown path, very much as the Peoples Party did. . . . If it decides, as we have no doubt it will, to take the well-established Laws of Economics as its guide, and form a party composed primarily of wage-workers, in full accord with the historic movement known as Socialism, it will go forward to certain growth and to certain victory. As we said a few weeks ago, the farmer belongs with us, but he must join a wage-workers' party, not the wage-workers' party of a farmer's party. We have had a farmer's party, let us now have a workingman's party."

THE RURAL PROLETARIAT

BY ERNEST UNTERMANN.

Synopsis of Argument.

- II. Comrade Kautsky's Position.
- III. Where I stand.

- B. The Political History of the American Rural Proletariat.
- IV. Conclusion.

I. INTRODUCTION.—DEFINITION OF RURAL PROLETARIAT. In the language of the "Communist Manifesto," a proletarian is a "laborer who lives only so long as he finds work, and who finds work only so long as his labor increases capital." The success of the Socialist movement depends on the proletariat of a nation in the Socialist Party. As the "Communist Manifesto" points out, the circle comprising the proletariat is necessarily widening with the progress of capitalist evolution.

"The lower strata of the middle class—the small trades people, shopkeepers, and retired tradesmen generally, the handicraftsmen and PEASANTS—all these sink gradually into the proletariat, partly because their diminutive capital does not suffice for the scale on which modern industry is carried on, and it is swamped in the competition with the large capitalist, partly because they do not possess the skill in production without the means of production. THIS THE PROLETARIAT IS RECRUITED FROM ALL CLASSES OF THE POPULATION."

But the dissolution of the old society goes still further. Says the "Communist Manifesto": "Further, . . . entire sections of the ruling classes are, by the advance of industry, precipitated into the proletariat, or at least threatened in their conditions of existence. These also supply the proletariat with fresh elements of enlightenment and progress. Finally, in times when the class struggle nears the decisive hour, the process of dissolution going on within the ruling class, in fact, within the whole range of the old society, assumes such a violent, glaring character, that a small section of the ruling class cuts itself adrift and joins the revolutionary class, that holds the future in its hands."

I have quoted our old historical document for the purpose of stimulating those comrades to a renewed study of its contents who are now trying to restrict the term "proletarian" to the city wage-workers. The desire to be exact in one's definitions, and even, expressed by the "Seattle Socialist," is perfectly legitimate, and is necessary for our best success. But we must always remember that the term "proletarian" means something else in the United States in 1903, than it did in Europe in 1848. If our two great leaders pointed out at that early date that a majority of the nation must join the proletariat in order to transform capitalist society into a Socialist society, it is certain a matter of small surprise that a man should be severely attacked and marked out for suspicion, when he tries to carry out their testament at the present stage of capitalist evolution.

Of course, our movement must always remain proletarian. But the "Communist Manifesto" itself points out that it must be proletarian in the sense that the interests of the proletariat must at all times be made the sole basis of our efforts. But it must not, and can not, be made a working class movement in the sense that only the wage-working proletariat should join it. Such a movement would be abortive, because it would not become politically supreme at the time when its supremacy would be most needed. There will always be plenty of proletarians with capitalist minds, ready to oppose their class-conscious fellow proletarians. If we want to keep all sympathizers of a non-proletarian character out of the movement, we should force them into independent capitalist parties, and retard our own progress.

The "Communist Manifesto" furthermore shows that the peasants also will become proletarians. I need, therefore, not give any new definition of rural proletariat. That of the "Communist Manifesto" applies also to the rural proletariat, and the "Manifesto" itself says so.

But the "Seattle Socialist" has quoted Kautsky against me. Now, apart from Marx and Engels, no Socialist writer has influenced my thought more deeply than Kautsky.

I consider myself a pupil of Kautsky, and I hope he shall have no reason to be ashamed of the results of my own investigations in regard to the American rural proletariat, let me, therefore, first give a summary of Kautsky's general position in this question.

COMMENTS ON UNTERMANN'S DEFINITION OF "RURAL PROLETARIAT."

This discussion was precipitated by Editor Untermann's assertion in the "Appeal" of Feb. 14, that "The class-conscious farmers, the rural proletariat of this country, are the sincerest and truest guardians of the working class."

If this assertion be true, it is of immense importance to have a clear and definite knowledge as to who these "class-conscious" farmers are. If they are the sincerest and truest guardians of working-class interests in the United States, we want to find them and entrust our interests to them.

Has Comrade Untermann enlightened us?

His definition is most conspicuous for its general and indefinite character. Even the definition of "Proletariat," quoted from the "Communist Manifesto" is that of Engels. He made no reference to the full and complete definition given by Engels in the edition of 1888.

"By Proletariat," says Engels, "is meant the class of modern wage-laborers who, having no means of production of their own, are reduced to selling their Labor Power in order to live." (Communist Manifesto, Chapter I, Note a.) The definition of 1848 means precisely the same and Marx himself uses almost identical language in his chapter of "Capital."

Accepting this definition of "Proletariat," who are the Rural Proletariat, those who are "reduced to selling their labor power in order to live," those who "have no means of production of their own?"

Who but farm laborers can meet this definition? Not even the tenant farmer is so reduced as to have "no means of production" and so as to have no commodity to sell but his labor power. In the sense of the Proletariat, as defined by Marx and Engels, where is your Rural Proletariat?

Do you mean, for example, those farm laborers who tramp from Kansas to the Dakotas every summer, selling their labor power to the wheat farmers at the later and later harvests? The census gives no hint of their number and the ballot box rarely receives their votes.

Do you mean those wage laborers who sell their labor power to the owners of the truck patches and dairy farms adjoining the city, or those whose existence also the census scarcely takes note, except as "population?"

No! Evidently you do not mean these at all. Proletariat in the precise sense of wage-workers, as Marx and Engels define it, is too exclusive. Therefore, the above definition of Comrade Untermann resorts to those statements of the "Manifesto" which describe "the lower strata of the middle class," and especially "the peasants," who are "sinking gradually into the proletariat."

Well, does he mean those who have sunk into the wage-working class, or

FATHER, BROTHER, OR HONS, who might be demanding better conditions for themselves and their families. If he refuses, he can be sent to the penitentiary.

Even this was but a beginning. In order that there might not be any doubt about who were to be attacked by these armies, another step was taken by the war department. The regular army and state militia at the present time is armed with the Krag-Jorgensen rifle. The cartridge which has hitherto been used has contained a steel-covered bullet which can be thrown by the smokeless powder charge behind it a distance of nearly two miles.

This cartridge was prepared to shoot a man similarly armed—an equipped professional soldier like the man who handled the Krag-Jorgensen.

Recently a new cartridge has been issued which, by this time, has been distributed to nearly all the state and national armories. This cartridge substitutes for the long steel bullet, previously used, two round 39-caliber bullets (about the size of buck shot). These bullets are only effective at a distance of about 100 or 200 yards, but within that distance the great twist in the rifling of the gun causes them to separate and give all the effect of a scattering shrapnel.

This sort of cartridge is of use only against men armed with nothing save their bare hands. It can be used against only those who, helpless and unarmed, are standing ready as targets.

THIS CARTRIDGE WAS ISSUED FOR THE PURPOSE OF KILLING UNION MEN. What do the union men of America propose to do about it? Striking will not help in this case. Lobbyists at Washington will do no good. Indeed, it might be well to ask what the present lobby were doing when the infamous measure was passed, that they did not even raise a voice against it. This would be a good thing for union men to investigate.

There is one way to meet this and all other similar attacks from a capitalist government, and that is to capture that government and use it in the interest of the working class. THAT IS WHAT THE SOCIALISTS PROPOSE TO DO.

A. M. SIMONS.

Small Farmers. Kautsky makes no such confusion. When he mentions Small Farmers, he says Small Farmers. When he means Wage Laborers on Farms, he says Rural Proletariat.

This term "Small Farmers" itself needs the most careful definition derived from the observed facts in the United States. The records of such facts are scanty, but an approximation to a definition will probably be reached in the progress of this discussion.

DEBATE SUNDAY NIGHT.

NEXT Sunday evening, May 3rd, at Carpenter's Hall, there will be a debate on the subject of "The Rural Proletariat." Socialism as at present advocated is an impossibility." Professor E. E. Van Voorhis, of Port Orchard, will do his best to uphold the affirmative, and Comrade William McDevitt, registrar at the University of Washington, will support the negative.

This debate grows out of the challenge issued some time in "The Appeal" by Comrade Untermann to the "Seattle Socialist" to present a speaker to uphold the negative of the question submitted in the challenge; but the challenger, at that time concealed under a nom de guerre, refused to meet a woman in debate, but stated that he was ready to "chew the marrow of the tongue" as Comrade McDevitt then accepted the challenge on behalf of Local Seattle. He declares that if Professor Van Voorhis is going to do as "chewing" the chowee will try to prove as tough as the toughest proposition, or as the man who goes up against it.

BALLARD NOTICE.

Ballard, Wash., April 28, 1903. Editor "The Socialist."—Please announce in the columns of "The Socialist" that Comrade Solbert will speak next Sunday evening at 8 p. m. in Macabee Hall.

Comrade William F. Helmsford of Redmond spoke last Sunday to a small but appreciative audience. Comrade Helmsford is a good speaker and thoroughly class-conscious.

If all the comrades of Ballard would put their shoulder to the wheel we could have the banner local in the state.

THE SOCIAL REVOLUTION

By Karl Kautsky, translated by J. H. Askew (Sole translation authorized by the author.)

PART I.—SOCIAL REFORM AND SOCIAL REVOLUTION.

Its Limitations in Cities.

In the same way, municipal Socialism finds its limitations in the existing order of state and society, even where universal suffrage prevails in the communes. The commune is always tied down to the general economic and political conditions, and can not extricate itself from them singly. Certainly, in municipalities, in industrial districts, the workers may get the administration into their own hands before they are strong enough to capture the political power in the state, and they are then in a position to eliminate from this administration at least the most objectionable features of hostility to labour, and to introduce reforms which can not be expected from a bourgeois regime. But these municipalities soon find their limits, not simply in the power of the state but also in their own economic helplessness. It is for the most part poor districts, almost exclusively inhabited by the proletariat, which are first won by the Social-Democrats. From whence can they obtain the means for carrying out their great reforms? As a rule, they are limited in the levying of rates by the laws of the state, and even where this is not the case they can not go beyond a certain limit in the taxation of the rich and well-to-do, without driving these, the only inhabitants from whom anything is to be obtained, away. Every thorough-going reform leads, among other things, to new rates and taxes, which will be found disagreeable, not only to the upper classes but also to the wider circles of the population. Many a municipality, which was won by Socialists or reformers standing very close to them, is again snatched from them by reason of the rates question, though their administration was exemplary. Thus it was once in London, thus recently at Roubaix.

In National Politics, Too.

But the political field! There, these limitations are unknown, and do we not find there an uninterrupted progress of labour protection laws, does not every Parliamentary session bring us new limitations of capitalism? And does not every election increase the number of our representatives in Parliament? Does not, thereby, our power in the state, our influence with the Government, grow slowly, but steadily and continually? Does not, thereby, capital become more and more dependent on the proletariat? Certainly, the number of factory laws grows from year to year. But if one looks closely into the matter, these laws will be found to be simply an extension of those already existing, to new sections of the proletariat—to shopmen, to barmen, to children outside the factories, to home workers, to seamen, etc. (an extension mostly of an insufficient and doubtful nature)—not an increasing strengthening of protection where it already exists. If, however, one considered how fast the capitalist mode of production extends its sphere, how fast it lays its hands on one trade after another, one country after the other, it will be found that the extension of labour protection follows at a far slower pace, that it nowhere overtakes the expansion of capitalism, but only with difficulty hobbles after it. And while the extension of the latter goes ever faster and faster, the former comes always more and more nearly to a standstill.

If, however, the progress of labour protection is small in extension, in depth it is almost nothing. In 1847 in England, under the pressure of the Chartist movement and the rapid impoverishment of the textile workers, the ten hours day was won for women and young persons; that is, practically for the entire workers in the textile in industry. Where have we advanced since then over the ten hours day?

The Second Republic in France had in 1853 settled the working day for all workers in Paris at ten hours, in the rest of France at eleven hours. When recently Millerand, on paper, and in a very inadequate way) got the Chamber to pass a ten hours day for those trades in which women and children work along with men (consequently not for all industrial establishments), this was looked on as a remarkable achievement, of which only a Socialist Minister could have been capable. And yet, he gave less than the English legislation of fifty years ago, since he allowed the ten hours day to apply even to children, for whom, in England, as early as 1844 a day of six and a half hours was fixed.

Already the General Congress of the "International" in 1866 had demanded an eight hours day as the first step towards all fruitful social reform. Thirty-six years later, at the last Congress of French Socialists at Tours, a delegate was found to oppose the acceptance of the eight hours day as one of our immediate demands. He wished simply "measures preparatory to the introduction of the eight hours day." And the man was not laughed at, but was able to stand as a candidate in Paris at the last election!

It would seem that the only progress we make in social reform is as regards the modesty of the social reformers.

Decay of Capitalism.

But how is that possible in face of the increase of Socialist representation on public bodies? The answer is simple, when this fact is not taken alone, but the reverse side of the medal is also considered. Certainly the number of Socialist deputies grows, but at the same time the bourgeois democracy decays more and more. Very often this last manifests itself externally in the decrease of its vote at the elections, but more often it is shown in its inner decay. It becomes more and more cowardly and weak of character, and only knows one means of combatting reaction—that is, to declare itself ready to carry out reactionary measures itself—a thing it really does when it gets into power. That is the present-day method of Liberalism of gaining political power.

When Bismarck saw his rule tottering, he prolonged the legislative periods of the Reichstag from three to five years. It was a desperate reactionary measure which roused a storm of indignation. In France, however, the last Radical Ministry of Republican defence, with a Socialist Ministry in its midst, asked, on the eve of the elections, for the prolongation of the legislative periods from four to six years and got it from a Republican majority. But for the Senate, this reactionary measure would have passed into law.

But bourgeois Liberalism does not simply disappear in proportion as Social Democracy grows, but simultaneously with the increasing influence of Social Democracy the different Parliaments, the influences of the Parliaments themselves wanes. These two phenomena proceed together at the same time, but have no direct connection with each other. On the contrary, Parliaments, where there are no Social-Democrats, as for instance, the Saxon or the Prussian Diets, decline in influence and efficiency much more rapidly than is the case with others.

Decline of Parliamentarism.

For this decadence of Parliaments there are various reasons. We can not, however, regard as the most important among them anything pertaining to the Parliamentary machinery and technique, which could be altered by an alteration in the rules of procedure, or in the sphere of Parliamentary powers; the most essential lie in the character of the classes who through Parliament influence the Government.

If Parliamentarism is to flourish it must have two things. One is a strong united majority, and second, a great social aim, for which this majority is energetically striving, and towards which it also drives the Government. Both were to hand at the heyday of Parliamentarism. So long as capitalism represented the future of the nation, it was supported in its struggle for emancipation by all sections of the population which had any Parliamentary influence; above all, by the mass of the Intellectuals. The majority of the petty bourgeois, even the workers, followed, too, the bourgeois lead.

Thus arose Liberalism as a homogeneous party with great aims. The struggle of Liberalism for Parliament and in Parliament lent the latter its importance.

Since then, that development has commenced, which as described already drives the proletariat which acquires a class consciousness of its own, as well as a section of the Intellectuals and of the petty bourgeois, and of the smaller peasant proprietors, into the Socialist camp, and makes the remainder of the petty bourgeois and the peasants absolutely reactionary, while the most energetic elements of the industrial capital units with the high finance, which never attached great importance to Parliamentarism although it understands how to use it—as vide Panama.

In this way the Liberal party falls to pieces, without the ruling class being able to form another great Parliamentary party of a homogeneous character capable of taking its place. The more reactionary the property classes grow, and the less homogeneous they become, the more they split up into small parties, the harder it becomes to bring together a solid Parliamentary majority. More and more is a majority only possible in the forms of temporary coalitions between the most divergent political parties—coalitions which rest on very insecure foundations, because not inner ties, but merely considerations of expediency, form the motive—coalitions which, from the outset are doomed to fruitlessness, because their elements are so varied that they can only hold together by each one giving up all thought of carrying into effect its own ideas. It is a peculiar misconception of the essential nature of these coalitions, arising as they do from the decay of Parliamentarism, and implying its political and social helplessness, for people to see in the participation of them the means for a slow and gradual growth of the proletariat into political power.

Legislatures Reactionary.

But the social development does not only lead to the break up of the big homogeneous Parliamentary parties into numerous fractions of a different, nay, antagonistic, nature; it leads also to the fact that the Parliamentary majorities are often more reactionary and hostile to labour than the Governments. Though the latter are but the servants of the ruling classes, they nevertheless still possess a better insight into the totality of political and social relations, and though the bureaucracy may be an obedient servant of the Government, nevertheless it develops its own life and tendencies, which, in their turn, react on the Government. The bureaucracy is recruited from the Intellectuals, in which, as we have seen, an understanding of the importance of the proletariat, be it ever so faint-hearted, is, after all, still on the increase.

From all this it results that not infrequently the Governments, with all their reactionary views and their hostility to labour, proceed not half so blindly as the ruling classes, who stand behind them with their following of petty bourgeois and peasant proprietors. Parliaments, which used to be a weapon to force the Government forward on the path of progress, become more and more a means of nullifying the small progress, which the Governments are having forced on them by circumstances, in proportion as the classes ruled through Parliamentarism become superfluous, nay, obnoxious, the Parliamentary machine itself loses in importance.

If, on the other hand, with an eye to the proletarian electors, a representative body here and there goes in for labour protection and democracy outbids the Government, the latter finds always sufficient means whereby to circumvent the Parliament.

In the United States the attack on the trade unions is carried on less by the legislature than by the law courts, in the same way it is the decision of the House of Lords, and not the legislation of the House of Commons, dependent on the electors, through which the attack on trade unionism was delivered in England; and that the spirit of the rejected anti-revolutionary bill is again active in the German courts of justice, the German workers know all too well.

Courts Usurp Power.

Thus, the candle burns at both ends. The ruling classes and the Governments condemn the Parliaments even more and more to fruitlessness, Parliamentarism becomes more and more incapable of pursuing a settled policy in any direction. It becomes more and more senile and powerless, and can only then regain its youth and vigor when the proletariat wins control over it, together with the entire machinery of the state, and makes it serve its purpose. Parliamentarism, so far from making revolution impossible or superfluous, requires itself the Revolution to become again efficient.

I must not be misunderstood in the sense that I consider democracy to be superfluous, or that I think co-operative societies, trade unions, the entry of Social-Democracy into municipalities and Parliaments, or the securing of individual reforms, to be worthless. Nothing could be further from my intention than that. On the contrary, that is all of great service to the proletariat; it only becomes of no importance as a means of staying off the Revolution—in other words, the capture of political power by the proletariat.

SECONDS THE MOTION.

North Yakima, Wash.

Editor Socialist.

Comrade Bowman, having extended an invitation, or rather requested our state convention be held here, for one of the reasons, I fully endorse his views, and should like a full state of inspectors to see if there are any Socialists in North Yakima. The Fourth of July would be a grand opportunity to do much good here, as the people come for miles to the state fair grounds. All our patriotism has settled down to a quiet race, and if we were not for our interest in those poor benighted savages the Fourth would be a dead issue here, as the contract holds them until June 15, and they will all want to be in Montana by the 5th of June, not later than the 10th.

By the way, the shears have all gone to work on that contract, and it will be interesting to see how they come out, as the contract holds them until June 15, and they will all want to be in Montana by the 5th of June, not later than the 10th.

Sent copies of Socialist at once to the plant, with orders, one should be placed in the cooperative hands.

Fraternally,

ADA GATCHELL.

DO YOU RECOGNIZE A CLASS STRUGGLE?

It may seem as though I have forgotten you, but in the never-resting, growing capitalist system, I with my class, the "Working Class," have been struggling for a living. A living! Have we gotten it? No. The meaning of that phrase to me is the best, the richest, stores of wealth moulded into usefulness by the inventive genius of man and obtained for the least human effort. Workmen, the class struggle is here. Do you recognize your class or that you belong to the working class? You surely are not so dull but that you can comprehend there is a struggle on, a struggle for existence, for bread and butter, if you please. Your endeavor is to get more for the only thing you have for sale, that which has builded everything on the face of earth, your "Labor." The capitalist endeavors to get your labor for the least wage possible and is forcing you each day to work for less. You are struggling against a reduction of wages, but you are fighting a losing fight. Now you recognize as a fact that there is a struggle between labor and capital. Now you must admit that there are classes. To which do you belong? If you are a laborer you have no choice, you are forced into the laboring class. Having now discovered that there are classes and that there is a struggle between these classes, we clearly understand what is known as the "Class Struggle."

Recognizing that there is a "Class Struggle," let us become conscious of our class, recognize our class, cast our lot with it and become class conscious.

Let us fight the battle for ourselves, for humanity, for posterity, by fighting for Socialism.

W. H. TAWNEY, Butte, Mont.

Emperor William is going to publish a paper for working men, "The Reichsbrotkrumen," under the direction of his own Bureau of Statistics. It is aimed to show the workers the dangers of Socialism. It will give an "impartial" hearing to all questions concerning labor.

HEATING STOVES

ADAPTED TO LOCAL CONDITIONS.

Every heating stove on sale here has been tested and found to be adapted to local fuel conditions—requires but a small amount of fuel.

This feature is very important because it is not the cost of the stove but the cost of the fuel to run that stove which demands attention. Heating stoves of every price are here, each one the best value you can find anywhere in the Northwest.

We are sole agents in Seattle for Round Oak Heaters, the best Heater made, a stove that is famous the world over for its small fuel consumption and the satisfaction it gives its user.

THE THEORY

OF HUMAN PROGRESSION

Natural Probability of a Reign of Justice

BY PATRICK EDWARD DOVE

Edited with biographical sketch by Alexander Harvey

Nothing more remarkable than the history of this book, except the book itself, has occurred in literary history. Dove was a generation in advance of Henry George in propounding the momentous doctrine of the Single Tax, and the charge of plagiarism made against George grew out of this fact. Dove, however, a deep scholar and profound thinker, champions the Single Tax on least from quite a different standpoint than George. In this respect the work will startle Single Taxers. It has been edited, not garbled, by Alexander Harvey, who prepares the book with a life of the author and a mention of the remarkable circumstances that led to its suppression. The volume is complete and unabridged.

NATIONAL HEADQUARTERS NEWS

Omaha, Neb., April 28, 1932

Contributions to the Special Organizing Fund to Saturday noon, April 25th, are as follows: J. LaVigne, Beverly, Mass., $9 cents; Leonard D. Abberly, New York City, $5; Clarence Smith, Butte, Mont., $5; D. Jenkins, Camden, Ark., $5 cents; M. Hilligitt, New York City, $10; F. M. Miller, Goldfield, Colo., $2; L. D. Elmer, New York City, $1; H. D. Howe, Table Square, Neb., $1; Thos. Mayes, Will, Trenton, Mo., $1; a friend in Cincinnati, $5; M. E. O'Brien, Laurium, Mich., $2; Local Washington, D. C., $2; T. McGray, Bellevue, Ky., $1.45, and Branch 2, Twenty-fourth Assembly District, New York City, $2. Total, $41.70.

National Lecturer and Organizer John C. Chase will close his Texas tour on May 6th and after speaking in Marietta, I. T., on May 7th, will go to Oklahoma Territory where he will spend two or three weeks, returning by way of Arkansas and Southern Missouri to Tennessee.

National Organizer M. W. Wilkins opened his work in Oregon at Ashland on April 16th, speaking to a large meeting at Medford on the 17th and 18th, and at Medford on the 19th, at Grant's Pass, the Opera House was packed to hear Wilkins debate with two Republican and Democratic lawyers. Comrade Engle, candidate for Congress, reported that "Will" had mopped the court with both of them, and the consensus of opinion was altogether in our favor. "Will" reports strong sentiment and the Socialists eager for work.

National Organizer John M. Ray started his work in the South with a large open air meeting on the Public Square in Nashville, Tenn., going there to New Decatur, Ala., there he reports four large open air meetings, and a large turnout at Decatur. He spent three days in New Decatur, where L. W. Altes has been nominated for mayor. He next day had a Birmingham district.

National Lecturer John W. Slayton addressed a successful meeting for the Socialists at McMechen, W. Va., on April 16th, spoke to the adopting carpenters of Wheeling on the 17th, wrote an article for the strikers for publication in answer to the bosses, spoke for Wheeling Socialists on the 18th, made the first Socialist speech ever delivered in Moundsville on the 19th, and with Comrade H. A. Leeds of McMechen, organized a new branch on the 20th. Slayton addressed 1,200 people in East Liverpool, Pa., for the Trades Council, and at Waynesburg, Pa. Next day had another successful meeting and was requested to return. Comrade Leeds writes that McMechen and Wheeling comrades are delighted with Slayton's work.

Harry McKee will hold meetings in Colorado, Wyoming and California on his way home to San Diego, under direction of National Headquarters.

The National Secretary has issued a call for a state convention of the Socialist Party locals in Alabama, to be held in Birmingham on Saturday, May 3rd, in the Carpenters' District Council Hall, 202 1/2 First Avenue, at 2:30 p. m., for the purpose of forming a state organization of the Socialist Party. National Organizer Ray will be present at the convention.

The Socialists have been having a hard time in Omaha this past week. Eleven of them have enjoyed the exhilarating experience of being arrested for daring to speak in certain street corners and for four nights the patrol wagon to take despots and the local bastards. The exact reason for this display of energy on the part of the city authorities is not clear, although the Socialists are reliably informed that it arises from a

At New Haven, Conn., the Socialists polled 713 as against 219 last spring in West Hudson county, 7,000 last year. The Socialists increased their vote in four wards from 19 to 84, and elected two constants. Reports from elsewhere show increases, but figures are not given.

OMAHA BOYS ARRESTED.

The Socialists in Omaha are putting up a stiff fight. The capitalists are trying to suppress their "6000" ball campaign by wholesale arrests. Road Mayor's account in another column. As an ex-speaker was arrested another took his place on the box. The Omaha papers are full of the accounts.

Keep it up, boys! Spread the revolutionary spirit.

OMAHA PLATFORM.

We, the Socialists of Omaha, in City Convention assembled, reaffirm our allegiance to the principles of International Socialism, and as usual extend our greeting to the men and women of the Labor world; especially to the Labor movement, who are so nobly battling on the economic field for the rights of the toiler so we give our moral and financial support; but in so doing we do not hesitate to criticize your attitude toward the Socialist Party, which is the political in organization destined to accomplish for the working class of the world all more than you have been organizing and striking for these many years.

Noting this criticism we believe that neither organization shall infringe upon the sphere of the other, and we remain a distinct organization, working in their proper sphere and separately as far as possible. For instance, if the Socialist Party were to win in 1934, no revolutionary legislation would be possible. Education of the Working Class must come before political victory will amount to anything.

Chicago Socialists have vindicated their own action, recognizing that Ultimate and not immediate success is what Socialism fights for.

Madden is after the "Coming Nation" now. Never mind, Comrades Warren and Richardson, it is good luck for you. Madden is the subscription-getter in the Socialist Party in the country. Ask the "Appeal." And "The Socialist" can lend you some good cartoons on Madden published when he was working for this paper.

ORGANIZER'S REPORT.

Don't forget the celebration of the International Labor Holiday at Germania Hall, Friday evening, May 1.

We organized a branch at Latona, precinct of the Ninth Ward, Saturday evening.

Have you noticed how quickly people will stop and listen to a Socialist speaker?

What are you doing toward the spreading of Socialism? Do you subscribe to the organizer fund? If not, why not?

Comrade McVeth spoke at Hillman station, Green Lake, Monday night to the Eighth Precinct branch. The Baptist church, Comrade Hanbury and the charter members are working hard to make this branch second to none in the city. That's the revolutionary spirit that will win our comrades.

You will never forgive yourself if you miss the debate at Carpenter Hall Sunday night.

Do you believe in Socialism? Then why don't you join the party? Seven teen applications on file to be acted upon at the next business meeting. Let's make it twenty-five.

Why can't we organize an orchestra and a choir in the party? Know we have talent enough. Come, comrades, speak up. Can you sing or play an instrument? All that is needed is a star.

A. HUTCHINSON, Seattle City Organizer.

The Socialist Educational Union will meet at the office of the Socialist, 116 Virginia Street, Seattle, Wash., on Sunday, May 3, at 2:30 p. m.

We have very important matters to consider and every member who can do so, should be sure to attend.

J. D. CURTIS, Secretary S. E. U.

desire on the part of the present mayor or to fix the resulting blame upon the Board of Public Commissioners. It is going on the ground of an opposition candidate for mayor. A sham fight is going on between the present capitalist majority candidates, and an approaching strike of the building trades on May 1st and the activity of the Socialists made it necessary to divert the working class voters by false issues. The first Socialists arrested on Tuesday, April 21st, were discharged with a warning next morning, but those taken up on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights were bound over until next Monday morning. In the meantime the Socialists have planned a big indignation meeting for Sunday night at which Comrades W. H. Moore, candidate for mayor, J. E. Morgan, State Secretary, Bernard Caffery, William Matley and W. E. Clark will be the speakers. The committee are P. J. Hyland, James W. Hawkins, Bernard McCaffery, E. Werner, J. LaVigne and J. E. Morgan. The speakers are forbidden to hold Friday morning. Comrades McCaffery and LaVigne have been arrested twice and are being held in jail on the charge of a conspiracy to hold meetings and collect crowds on the same corners. The Socialists are forbidden to hold meetings and collect crowds on the same corners. The Socialists are forbidden to hold meetings and collect crowds on the same corners. The Socialists are forbidden to hold meetings and collect crowds on the same corners.

The Indiana State Convention opened April 25th at Indianapolis. State Secretary O'Neal of the latter State admitted an interesting report of the work done during the past year. There are now 100 local active and organizing on the agitation and 44 others that only need attention to be put into good working order. It is proposed that each local appoint a dues collector, that an initiation fee be levied, and that a system of reports that will insure the ascertaining of the number of members and the progress of the work of a state organizer to give him entire time to taking the field, and make the party a more effective force.

Socialists of Essex county, N. J., will celebrate the advance made by Socialism in that State by holding a banquet at Jacoby's, 882 Broad Street, Newark, on Saturday evening, May 2nd. It is proposed to make the occasion the most notable social event in the history of the party in Essex county.

Returns from the municipal elections held here in Omaha this past week show additional gains for the Socialist Party. At Rockford, Ill., the fight was between the Socialist and a combination Independent ticket, and the feature of the election was the strong vote polled by the Socialist C. D. NOTES.

J. Edward Morgan, author of "The braava Breezes," has quit the service of the "Appeal" in the South and returned to Omaha. He will now resume his "Breezes" in "The Socialist."

Comrade Ryan Walker of New York, has been sick and now his wife is sick. They are taking a trip to Norfolk, Va. for their health. "The Fairy Stories from Real Life" will be resumed as soon as he is able to work again. These cartoons are making a great hit.

Comrade Troelstra has been elected from Amsterdam to the Holland Party with 899 votes in contrast with the election laws disfranchise two out of every three workmen. Comrade Polak was elected to the city council.

Boston Socialists have suspended Martha Moore for two years from membership in the party. She is said to have charged the Socialist Party with being in control of Albus and Free Lovers, because the State convention refused to consider a resolution condemning these things.

"The Social Democratic Herald" of Milwaukee charges at Chicago Socialists because their vote this spring was less than last fall's vote, claiming this loss was due to a platform without "immediate demands." It forgets three things, at least.

First, Chicago Socialists had to meet a "Union Labor" ticket and they beat it to a standstill.

Second, Chicago Socialists made the first break in a great city in America by electing an alderman.

Third, Too many votes at present may be the ruin of the Socialist Party. For instance, if the Socialist Party were to win in 1934, no revolutionary legislation would be possible.

Chicago Socialists have vindicated their own action, recognizing that Ultimate and not immediate success is what Socialism fights for.
